

LATEST FASHION NEWS FOR WOMEN

NEW YORK, April 17.—Easter, with its usual fashion parade, is a thing of the past, and to many who had expected radical and revolutionary changes of line and style the display was, in a large measure, disappointing. Changes there were many, but they were of subtle character and in many cases only noticeable to the close and experienced observer. A general review of the styles displayed during this year's Easter parade seems to confirm the correctness of the prediction that no radical changes would be made in the present spring and summer season, but that the extreme rigor of last winter's styles would be considerably modified and toned down to reasonable limits.

There were a great many dresses which scarcely showed any deviation from the lines in vogue during the past winter season, but, although most of them were pretty they seemed to be just a trifle out of style. Some of the frocks had been slightly remodeled to bring them into closer conformity with the demands of the present fashion and these clearly indicated the trend of the new direction.

The most striking feature of the Easter display was, undoubtedly, the seemingly endless variety of ideas as to details of cut, materials, ornamentations and trimmings were extremes, even to grotesqueness, in some of the costumes worn by some of the more daring ultra-fashionables, but these were exceptions. Most of the costumes were in good taste, however neither in scantiness nor in fullness.

To sum up the result of the observations it may be said that the clinging front and side lines with slightly shortened waist line and straight falling front will be retained during the spring and summer. That will be welcome news to a majority of women, as this style is generally becoming. But women whose development is rather too voluptuous to meet the requirements of the Directoire style will rejoice to find their clinging skirts widening almost imperceptibly into rippling folds toward the bottom instead of closely defining every line of their limbs, and will rejoice still more enthusiastically to find narrow but soft fulness introduced in the back of the skirt, so that here too the exuberant lines of her figure are toned down and hidden.

Judging from the latest importation from Paris, displayed in the fashionable shops there is considerable liberty as to the position of the waist line, but bouffancy, except in the most summery of materials, is positively tabooed. Even where there is fullness of skirt it must be of the limp-est kind. The lines of the arms, too, must be clearly defined, and, whatever the situation may eventually be, for the moment most of the new models intended for any except evening wear, have long sleeves.

The claim of the one-piece frock is allowed on every hand, and a smart walking costume of the season is unquestionably a simple gown of this sort, to be worn with a coat of the same material, or of silk matching the material in color. It must not be assumed, however, that the old-fashioned coat, skirt and blouse will be entirely out of fashion, for such costumes are eminently satisfactory for many purposes, and especially is this true during the hot summer months, when dust is likely to play havoc with a gown worn every day. The one-piece model, when designed for hot weather, naturally calls for the finest and coolest material. For early spring light cloths, serges and Henriettas are used, while for the more advanced season pongee and foulards will be in vogue.

A great amount of embroidery is seen on the latest imported gowns. The most effective of these gowns are of linen. One of the remarkable dresses just brought out is of khaki tussor, made with a long coat, elaborately garnished with linen embroidery, in the same shade of color. Very long coats are seen of many of the tailored suits, and it may be added that the long jacket is wonderfully well suited to the American woman, whose long, slender lines possess more grace than the English or French woman can boast of.

The new jacket is somewhat on the style of Louis XIV., except that it is smarter in detail. It is trimmed with big cloth-covered buttons, and a good deal of embroidery besides. The closing extends all the way down the front, providing ample use for a number of buttons.

There is every evidence that the coming spring and summer seasons will be characterized by a wealth of rich coloring in woman's costumes. Most of the colors which have won popularity in the past are represented in the materials displayed, but many of the louder colors have been considerably toned down. The tendency seems to be toward greater softness and greater artistic effectiveness of the hues. One of the popular colors which has thus been modified is Suede, others are Taupe, Pompeian red, Havana brown and Khaki. Purples, too, have undergone a marked change and are now smartest and most beautiful when they show a silvery sheen upon their surface.

In millinery no particular preference is shown for any color. All shades are employed and strong contrasts are avoided in most cases. A particularly attractive new shade seen frequently in all kinds of materials is cendre or ash. This shade differs little from smoke or iron gray, but a hint of brown or red is put in the dye, which greatly adds to the effect of the color and enlivens it.

In looking over the millinery it is noticeable that lots of cabriolets are being shown by the fashionable modistes. Directoire hats are also made, and, as a general rule, the crowns are very high. In these hats a great change has been made in the straw. Where formerly it had been fine, as in the leghorn and chip hats, now it is in wide, coarse braid, which makes a hat of seemingly great weight. Nevertheless these new creations have certain style, and the fashion is likely to hold during the whole season. Another novelty is a wide meshed tulle used for covering straw shapes; as for instance, a pink straw covered with a gray tulle or a dark blue straw covered with a shade of taupe. Nearly every hat is faced with moire or with straw in different shade from that of the hat itself. Ribbon strings are very fashionable and extremely becoming, especially to the younger women.

CENSUS APPROPRIATION FOURTEEN MILLION

BILL WILL BE INTRODUCED MONDAY PROVIDING FOR ENUMERATION.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 17.—The census appropriation bill providing for an appropriation of $10,000,000 for expenses incident to the first two years of collecting data for the 13th census will be introduced Monday by Congressman Tawney, chairman of the house appropriation committee. The total estimated cost of the census will approximate $14,000,000. The bill also provides for several deficiency appropriations.

High collars may be completely removed by using frequently the juice of cucumbers, or by tying thin slices of cucumber about the neck when retiring.

To take off stains on tan boots, apply a paste of Fuller's earth and methylated spirit, and rub it off when it has become dry. Two or three applications may be necessary. Afterward polish the boots in the usual manner.

Home-made wine, to be good, should never be tapped for drinking until it is at least one year old. At the end of that time it should be bottled and allowed to remain for another year, if possible, to have it in fine condition.

The white spots so often seen on finger nails are due to bruises, and can be promptly removed by applying a mixture of refined pitch and gum myrrh. Put it on the nails before going to bed and rub off with a little olive oil in the morning.

One good way of sterilizing milk is to place the bottle or can containing it in a vessel of water on the fire and allow it to remain there until it reaches 180 degrees Fahrenheit, keeping it at this temperature for half an hour before setting it aside to cool.

Handsomely decorated china plates when not in use, should be carefully put in piles, with round pieces of cotton flannel between them. The pieces should be cut large enough to reach beyond the rim underneath the plates or saucers, as they are particularly liable to scratch the glazing of the plates upon which they are resting.

Cold sores can be cured the quickest by constant applications of pure rosewater. Add a few drops of camphor if you have it handy.

A few trays of charcoal set on the floor and shelves of a damp cellar will make the air pure and sweet, and take away the musty smell.

Celery may be kept fresh several days if after it has been cleaned and washed, it is put in an ordinary glass jar, covered tight and placed in a cool place.

When cleaning paint, do not use hot water, as this destroys the varnish, and will cause the paint to wear off. The water used never should be more than barely lukewarm.

In canning fruit use the extra juice that cannot be put in the jars to make jelly. Add enough dissolved gelatin to the juice to make it mold when cold. Serve it with whipped cream. Do not throw away old bent tacks. They are useful in cleaning jars and bottles. Half fill the jars with hot soapuds, put in the tacks, shake the bottle vigorously and then rinse with clear water.

Wormwood boiled in vinegar and applied as hot as can be borne on a sprain or a bruise is an invaluable remedy. The affected member should afterward be rolled in flannel bandages to retain the heat.
